

The Honest Company Donates 1.5 Million Diapers to Baby2Baby

May 14, 2018

LOS ANGELES (May 14, 2018) – The Honest Company, a mission-driven business providing 100+ trusted and effective products across a wide range of consumer categories, is expanding its support of Baby2Baby, a charitable organization providing basic necessities to families in need. In celebration of Baby2Baby as The Honest Company's official charitable partner, the company has committed to donating 1.5 million diapers to Baby2Baby in honor Mother's Day in support of mothers everywhere.

"At The Honest Company, we're devoted to empowering people to live happy, healthy lives," says The Honest Company Founder Jessica Alba. "A mother should never have to choose between feeding her children and buying diapers. Baby2Baby helps new mothers so they don't have to make that impossible decision, and we can't think of a better charitable partner for The Honest Company."

Other plans to support Baby2Baby throughout 2018 include providing baby bundles filled with diapers, and hygiene items to 600+ families annually. The Honest Company employees will also continue to be involved, visiting Baby 2 Baby's Los Angeles headquarters monthly to assemble kits for families. The company will also host five packing parties this year at its offices in Playa Vista.

"The Honest Company and Baby2Baby share a joint mission to improve the lives of families everywhere," said Kelly Sawyer Patricof and Norah Weinstein, Co-Presidents of Baby2Baby. "Baby2Baby is grateful for The Honest Company's dedication to drive change in the community – together we will help a lot of families around the United States."

About The Honest Company:

"As a mom of three, I understand the struggle of finding safe and effective diapers that grow with your baby. In updating our game-changing diaper line, we asked our Honest parents which features they wanted to make the ultimate Honest diaper: help trap blowouts, a safe and easy to read wetness indicator, and being made from sustainable materials was what we heard most often. I'm so proud that we were able to incorporate all of these amazing benefits and develop what is, I think, the best diaper out there. Plus, our new technology means a more efficient design, so we can reduce the impact on the environment by using less material but still provide more comfort and better protection than before." said Jessica Alba, Founder, The Honest Company.

As a mission-driven company, the latest diaper line is part of Honest's strategy to drive disruptive innovation in a way that combines conventional needs and the natural space, providing parents the products necessary to protect their baby and live consciously.
